The calendar serves as a planning guide for the Pack, a way to communicate upcoming activities and is a history of what the Pack has done in the past, saving events, dates and times for easy reference.

The calendar should be populated with tentative information 3 years into the future. This helps to predict future leadership needs and to plan for a rotating schedule that keeps the boys interest, yet is easy for the leaders to pull together. Examples are alternating the Space Derby and Raingutter Regatta, or alternating visits to the USS Pampanito and USS Hornet.

The goal in Pack planning should be to move activities from tentative to planned (Bold face, indicating that a leader is working on the event, the date, location and time are set, that the venue is booked) at least one year in advance of the event. The calendar should be set by or at the annual Pack Planning meeting, held in July, and reviewed and extended in December/January.

Planning in advance saves tremendous time - for example, the Pampanito must usually be booked at least 1 year in advance to get a date, and event then can only accommodate 45 people (total of boys and parents). Booking less than a year in advance can mean that the schedule is already filled or that not every boy in the Pack will be able to attend. Summer camps also fill up quickly, and only those Packs that contribute leaders/sponsor a station will be able to reserve space.

Booking early for some events (Family Camp, Coyote Creek, Pow-Wow) can frequently give the Pack a discount rate or other benefits that should be taken advantage of.

When events are not planned far in advance, there can be a need for Pack leaders to have to "drop everything" to fill out paperwork, collect money, market the event to the Pack, get supplies... on short notice to make the event happen. This is very draining on everybody involved and should be avoided.

Our goal is to have an active calendar so that the boys will have many opportunities to do things with the Pack, even if their family schedule precludes them from attending one or two events. Also by giving families one year notice they have the opportunity to plan around events that they want to attend. We also seek to include District and Council events (Coyote Creek, Scout-O-Rama, District Pinewood Derby, Family Camp, Day Camp) both to be good citizens in the scouting community and because attending and contributing to these events takes less effort than creating our own event.
